A NATION'S SORROW.

More than ordinary preparations were being made throughout the Union to celebrate the 105th anniversary of our Independence as a nation, when the news flashed over the country that our President had been stricken down with an assassin's bullet. A prolonged groan of anguish went out from all over this land, and our holiday which was to have been a day of rejoicing became a day of mourning. Never since the assessination of Lincoln has this Nation been weighed down with so great a sorrow. And this grief is not confined to the narrow limits of party or sect, but is the spontaneous out burst of the feelings of an entire people—a people generous in its impulses, patriotic in all its purposes and having a true and honest affection for its chie magistrate

There was a feeling of relief when it was told that Gitteau was not the agent or tool of any conspiracy, but simply a hair-brained adventurer-a disap pointed office seeker, a dangerous mo nomaniac, upon whom the responsi bility of this infamous crime is wholly thrown. The details of the terrible affair are given in the dispatches which we publish elsewhere, and it not neceseary to refer to them here.

At present it would seem that the President is in a fair way to recover. The prayers of millions of people ascend to heaven each day that he may be spared to fulfil a prophecy which has been so often made that he was to become one of the best, wisest and mosthonored Presidents that we have ever had

To be sure he is in a very critica

We have been compelled to cull them somewhat, leaving out principally the various bulletins of the physicians. Many of our readers no doubt have not been able to peruse the daily papers and they will thus find something to interest them in the successive dispatches published.

THE attempt to ring Conkling and Arthur into "Guiteauism" is very unjust. There is not the least particle of evidence to sustain such a thought. We believe both of the parties named to be guiltless, either in thought or act, with reference to such a charge, and that he who put such nonsense affoat is none too good to become a companion of Guiteau's in assassination.

The Department only lacks $80,000 of being selfsustaining now. James has in four months cut down over a million dollars in steals and "perquisites."

BOUTELL, the Topeka saloon-keeper who has been defying all law and order by selling liquor illegally and openly, has at last been convicted. He had been acquited once before and the jury had failed to agree in two other cases against him. He has reached the length of his rope and justice is at last

field was shot in the depot while on his way to Long Branch, this morning 10 A. M.-President Garfield is now lying in a private room in the officers quarters of the Baltimore & Potomac depot. Dr. Bliss, Surgeon General Barnes and Dr. Purvis (colored) are in attendance. The shooting was done by a slender man, about five feet seven thes in height. He refused to give his name, but it is said by persons who profess to know him that his name is Dooley. The prisoner was arrested immediately after the firing by officers in the depot. He was first taken to police headquarters, and subsequently removed to the District jail. The shooting occurred in the ladies' room of the depot, immediately after the President had entered, walking arm in arm with Secretary Blaine, on their way to the limited express train which was about ready to leave. Secretary Blaine, on hearing the pistol shots, two in number, rushed in the direction from which they came, with a view of arresting the would-be assassin. Before reaching the man, however, the and found him prostrated. Both shots took effect, the first in the right arm and the second just above the right hip, and near the kidney. The phy-sicians have probed for the balls unmade as comfortable as possible in his hamber at the White House, and all grounds are excluded from the grounds arounding the mansion. Immense to wide surrounding the mansion. Immense to wide surrounding the mansion. Immense to wide a friend, and when he care?" asked the mother.

11:50 A. M.—President Garfield is conscious and does not complain of great suffering. He has just dictated a telegran, to his wife. It is impossible to say as yet what the result will be, but the surgeons think the wounds are not necessarily fatal. The following telegram has been sent:

Mrs. Garfield, Elberon, Long Branch:

Mrs. Garfield, Elberon, Long Branch:
The President wishes me to say to you from him that he has been seriously hurt, how seriously he can not yet say. He is himself and hopes you will come to him soon. He sends his love to you. A. F. BOCKWELL. The name of the assassin, as written by himself, is Charles Guiteau, and he says that he is an attorney at law in Chicago. The Star says in an extra just issued that when the assassin was arrested he said : " I did it, and want to be arrested; I am a Stalwart, and Arthur is President now. I have a letter here that I want you to give to Gen. Sherman. It will explain every-thing. Take me to the police station." The following physicians are in con-sultation at the Executive Mansion: Drs. Bliss, Gord, Huntington and Woodward, of the United States army, Townsend, Lincoln, Reyburn, Norris, Purvis, Patterson, Surgeon General Barnes and the Surgeon General of Secretary Blaine was not going with the party, but went down to bid the President good bye. He said: "The President and I were walking arm in arm towards the train. I heard two shots and saw a man run. I started after him, but seeing that he was grabbed just as he got out of the room I came to the President, and found him lying on the floor. The floor was covered with the President's blood. A number of people who were around have some of that blood on their persons, I think I know the man, I think his name is Ditton. The assassin is about five feet and seven inches in height, strong, though not stout, built. The weapon he used was a revolver about nine inches long; it had an ivory handle; the calibre was very large it is what is called a California pistol It made a very loud report. He says condition; but there is in favor of his recovery his admirable pluck, cleanly and temperate habits and a robust constitution. He has been confident of recovery from the first, and that is half the battle. Had his heart sunk or his nerve failed, he would have soon passed away. We hope to be able to announce in our next issue that he is well along towards a complete recovery.

JULY 2, 1881. To the White House: The President's tragic death was a sad necessity, but it will unite the Republican party. To save the Republic, life is a flimsy dream, and it matters little where one goes. A human life is of small value. During the war thousands of brave boys went down without a tear. I presume the Presibe happier in Paradise than here. It will be no worse for Mrs. Garfield, dear soul, to part with her husband this way than by a natural death. He

WASHINGTON, July 3.—The advisability of probing the president's wound for the bullet was considered at consultation to-day of his physicians and it was determined not to make any attempt to extricate the ball, owing to the fact that the reaction which should follow the shock of injury had not yet taken place and besides great fears were entertained at that hour that the President would not rally. A delicate and careful examination was delicate and careful examination was made later in the evening which re-vealed the fact that the location of the changed only in one thing: Pratt has withdrawn from the race. > WASHINGTON, July 3.-When the physicians informed the cabinet last evening that the President was sinkevening that the President was sink-ing, information was sent to Vice-President Arthur, with the request that he should come here on the mid-night train. He came alone, and pla-ced himself at the disposition of the cabinet. He had naturally a very strong desire to express in person to the President the warmest sympathy. the President the warmest sympathy, and rejoicing at the favorable change over. There is a great difference of opinion There is a great difference of opinion among the medical men about the probability of the President surviving his injuries, but there is an air of hopefulness in the faces of the attending physicians despite his critical condition. The country reasonably cherishes some hope that the President may recover. The lapse of time since the bullet did its work, without large loss of blood, renders it probable that no large artery or vein has been severed. Had this occurred there would doubtless have been a fatal hemorrhage before this time. His regular habits, his cheerful spirits, his unclouded mind, his great fortitude, his hopeful reliance on providence and his determination to recover if possible—these are all important factors in his favor, and while they by no means affect the fact that his condition is one which cutails the gravest apprehension, they serve to remove the conviction which obtained so generally last night that his case is so absolutely hopeless.

CLEVELAND, O., July 3.—The news among the medical men about the probability of the President surviving

"No. He was shot by an assassin, but not killed," replied the daughter.
"The Lord help me" exclaimed Mrs. Garfield. Mrs. Larabee assured her mother that the latest reports were favorable and showed her the telegram saying that the President was resting quietly, in a fair way to recover.

"When did you hear this?" queried Mrs. Garfield.
"Yesterday afternoon." replied Mrs. "Yesterday afternoon," replied Mrs. arabee, "but we thought it best no

Larabee, "but we thought if best not to tell you the news."

"You were very thoughtful. I am glad you did not tell me," said Mrs. Garfield, adding that she thought something had happened, as ahe had noticed the manner of her daughter had been peculiar. She bore up under the intelligence with such fortitude that she was shown the dispatches received from Major Swalu, Secretary Hunt, and Harry Garfield. She read the dispatch calmly and said: "How could anybody be so cold-hearted as to want to kill my baby?" In general conversation she wondered what was coming next and enquired: "What will probably be done with the assassin? He deserves to, be hung." She does not contemplate going to Washington unless sent for, thinking she will be telegraphed for if necessary to go on. It being remarked to her that news continued to grow favorable she said: "I am glad to hear it, but I am afraid we are hoping against fate. It is terrible."

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 4—The conspiracy theory is again discussed to-day, and notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Blaine and most of the Cabinet members indignantly scout it, the fact that it is so pushed shows that it is with a purpose. The officers of the Government who have been following clews, say that absolutely nothing to connect anybody with the crime butthe miserable wretch now in confine ment has been discovered. WASHINGTON, D. C., July 4.—Chie Brooke, of the secret service division says he has followed up every clue and every theory of a conspiracy, and has proven satisfactorily that there was none. He has reported to Secretary Windom that Guiteau had no confedwas alone in the assassination. The conspiracy theory has been abandoned

LONG BRANCH, July 4.—The first report as to the manner with which Mrs. Garfield heard the news were inaccurate. She was shocked, naturally but not frantic; not a groan nor a sol escaped her. She sighed, and waved her hands rather convulsively, while a look of unutterable anguish swept over her delicate features. Every one concedes that she bore the terrible news with marked Christian-like for-

Scoville esq., a well-known atterney at law in this city, gives the following sketch of Guiteau's life: "Chas Julius Guiteau Guiteau's life: "Chas Julius Guiteau is my wife's youngest brother, and iu about 40 years of age. He was born in Ann Arbor, Mich., or Freeport, Ill.; I don't know which. The family moved to Freeport about forty years ago. He was sent to Ann Arbor university early, but becoming infatuated versity early, but becoming infatuated with the doctrine of the Onelda community, he left college and joined them. He put all his money, some $500 or $900, into the community, but soon became dissatisfied with the soci-

He again appeared on the scene here, claiming to have experienced a change of heart. He soon became puffed up with his own importance, and began advertising himself as "the lawyer, theologian and lecturer." This frequently got him into difficulty with the owners of halls he had engaged to deliver lectures in as no one came to hear him. In fact he was constantly getting into trouble of some kind with some one. I have always considered him insane, but harmless, though on one occasion I remember he did raise an ax and threaten to kill his sister, my wife. She wanted steps taken at that time to have him confined in an asylum, but I pressed her not to as he would have been all the more dangerous vn enemy should he get out. He would rather die than do manual labor. His hobby was to lecture, talk, dream and study. I can imagine no reason for his attack on President Garfield. Although he was no politician he voted the Republican ticket.

He talked in his same tonse of said was and was a said was a

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Dr. Blies mays emphatically that the President is decidedly improved this morning, and that his prospect is more favorable than at any time yet. The President this morning woke up from a good sleep, and all present in the room were delighted to hear him say, "I am hungry, and must have something to eat," and he was given some chicken broth, though the doctors had some fear that it would not remain on his stomach. It did, however, and after eating it the President remarked, "I feel much better." Then the doctors made an examination, and found that the swelling in the stomach called "tylpalite," examination, and found that the swell-ing in the stomach called "tylpalite," had receded, and that the pulse was gradually falling to its normal condi-tion. All the faces at the White House today wore expressions of hope. The doctors show that they really feel the encouraging words they utter. The weather is warm but the President's weather is warm but the President's room is most pleasantly situated, and gets all the breeze there is. The surgeons agree that the turning point in the case will probably occur to-day."

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Mrs. Garfield is the only person except the doctors and the nurses and Gen. Swaim who is allowed to enter the President's room at will. The other ladies, wives of the Cabinet officers and intimate friends are permitted occasionally to visit the room one or two at a time. of the Cabinet officers and intimate friends are permitted occasionally to visit the room one or two at a time. Whenever Mrs. Garfield goes into the room he welcomes her with a smile and she invariably speaks to him encouragingly. The surgeons do not remain continuously in the President's room. They can, so they say, judge better of the case by remaining away except when they have an examination, and then they compare his condition with what it was at the time of his last visit. A good portion of the time one of the ladies is allowed to remain' in the room to fan the President. Mrs. Blaine frequently relieves Mrs. MacVeagh at the bedside, and she is relieved in turn by one of the other ladies. The President is inclined to talk to visitors more than the doctors believe is for the best, but he always talks in a cheery way. In response to an inquiry as to how he felt, he said: "My good friends, be of good cheer. I mean to pull through, and I will." Commissioner Dudley, who is an intimate friend, was admitted last night to the President's room. "Dudley, I am glad to see you," was the remark of the sick man. "I know you have come here to see Garfield, and not the President." Still addressing Mr. Dudley, he said: "I am very anxious to live, indeed, and if necessary I could let them cut off my limbs inch by inch. Still, if I have to die, I am ready to go. Keep your courage up." The President frequently chats and jokes with those about his bedside.
